Course Objectives and Material

The Rocky Mountain Trauma and Emergency Medicine Conference is designed to emphasize the latest techniques in trauma care and emergency medicine, as well as the team approach to care of the injured patient. The conference provides an excellent educational opportunity for those whose expertise and interest lie in the area of trauma and emergency medicine: physicians, nurses, pre-hospital personnel, firefighters, search and rescue personnel, respiratory therapists and others.

The director for the Rocky Mountain Trauma and Emergency Medicine Conference is Ernest E. “Gene” Moore, M.D. Dr. Moore, Director of Trauma Surgery at Denver Health, is an expert in trauma, and editor of a premier trauma text. Well known nationally and internationally on a variety of topics, Dr. Moore is one of the most published researchers in trauma in the world.

The conference co-director is Christopher Colwell, M.D. Dr. Colwell is an Emergency Medicine attending physician at Denver Health, and the Medical Director for the Denver Health Paramedic Division and the Denver Fire Department. Nationally recognized as a speaker in EMS and emergency medicine, Dr. Colwell is well published on a variety of topics.

Upon completion of this conference, participants will be able to discuss and debate current trends, as well as the latest concepts in emergency medicine and trauma care.

As in years past, we are honored to include an outstanding guest faculty. This year we welcome:

William Mallon, M.D.

Los Angeles, CA

Alice Gervasini, Ph.D., RN

Boston, MA

These nationally recognized speakers join the conference faculty who are widely recognized for their expertise in, and contributions to, the advancement of trauma care and emergency medicine. Attendees will appreciate the diversity of these individuals, and the strength they lend to the program.
